

Topic 4 DQ 1:

Assessment Description

Which factors might encourage you to develop a heterogenous group and not a homogenous group? Explain your response. Provide an example of the following types of norms: prescriptive, proscriptive, descriptive, and injunctive.

Several variables may promote the formation of a diverse group. Engaging with people from various origins helps expand one's comprehension of multiple cultures, beliefs, and values. This can foster personal development and encourage inclusivity within the group. Within diverse groupings, individuals can utilize their distinct abilities and knowledge to tackle intricate problems with greater efficiency. This can result in improved decision-making and problem-solving results.

Topic 4 DQ 2:

Assessment Description

What are two group participant roles that have the most impact on member-to-member interactions? Explain your response.

Both the leader and the facilitator, who is also sometimes referred to as the gatekeeper, are vital positions that have a significant impact on groups. The organization is established by the leader with a specific objective in mind, and the leader then gathers members to work toward the accomplishment of the group's objectives. It is the responsibility of the group leader to make decisions that will lead to the accomplishment of the group's goals. The group leader possesses authority inside the group. The leaders of the group are responsible for
