

1. Question: In distance counseling, informed consent should include
 - a. consent to waive counselor liability in the event of client crisis, as the counselor may be in a different time zone or otherwise inaccessible.
 - b. consent to waive right to confidentiality and privacy, as it cannot be guaranteed in distance counseling.
 - c. the type of software used, guarantee of confidentiality and privacy, and consent to view client social media.
 - d. distance counseling credentials, cultural/language differences, time zone differences, emergency procedures to follow if the counselor is not available, anticipated response time, and possible denial of insurance.
 - e. the same information as typical face-to-face informed consent.

2. Question: Within the counseling profession, the primary national voluntary certification agency is
 - a. American Mental Health Counselors Association
 - b. National Board for Certified Counselors.
 - c. American Counseling Association.
 - d. American Association for Counseling and Development.
 - e. National Registry of Certified Counselors.

3. Question: If a counselor is asked to disclose privileged information about a client who cannot be located, then the obligation to assert the privilege rests with
 - a. The client's attorney.
 - b. The client's spouse, if any.
 - c. The counselor.
 - d. The client's next of kin.
 - e. The executor of the client's estate.

4. Question: Privileged communication statutes
 - a. Protect clients from having confidential communications with their counselors disclosed in a court of law without their permission.
 - b. Protect the privacy of counselors.
 - c. Make it a crime for counselors to reveal confidential communications with their clients unless their clients give them written permission to disclose the information.
 - d. State that counselors will lose their licenses if they reveal confidential information clients tell them in counseling sessions.
 - e. Ensure that counselors will never have to repeat information clients tell them in a counseling session.

5. Question: If you believe another counselor is behaving in an unethical manner, the first thing you should do is
 - a. Report the matter to the counselor's administrative supervisor.
 - b. Discuss the matter with the counselor and attempt to get him or her to change the behavior.
 - c. File a complaint with the state licensure board.