

I know for me to be a qualified teacher in the future, I would have to learn professional practice because these practices would help me to have the behaviors, knowledge, and skills that is required to be a effective teacher in the future. For me already being a Personal Care Assistant, I am already one step ahead of becoming a professional teacher where I can step into a classroom with students instead of myself being a student. To ensure that I have the crucial skills to be able to adapt to have a classroom of students of my own I know that taking professional dispositions seriously is the key.

In the classroom I currently work for, I will demonstrate professionalism as a Personal Care Assistant and hopefully a future teacher in the high school life skills class by maintaining a professional relationship with the teachers, and by collaborating appropriately with my fellow Personal Care Assistant. These two professional dispositions are valuable to put into practice to ensure that when I work with teachers and aide in the future and talk with administrators above me, I will be professional and respectful to them. Showing respect and being support with my colleague is crucial to maintain a balance to practice because I will have to be a role model for future students of my own.

In the classroom I will teach the students manners where everyone is treated as everyone want to be treated and help each other in the classroom. When I do some student teaching, I will be professional, dress appropriate attire, and talk to the teacher in a timely and respectful manner. As a future teacher, I would show these professional attributes. It would help me prepare for future classroom I would teach and how I would step into the role of being a professional teacher in the classroom.

Teaching is not an easy profession like most people stereotype it into. I think going into teaching is one of the most difficult jobs. Being a teacher isn't an easy profession to be in and going into teaching is one of the most difficult jobs. Being a teacher requires that we learn how to professional every day in school in order to be an effective teacher. I need to be prepared to keep my future students engaged in class, keep a positive attitude even if I'm having a bad day, have a clear and well-organized agenda for the students to understand, and to be professional in the way in which I teach.
