

Topic 2 DQ 1

In 150-200 words, please analyze the document's purpose and audience. Who, for example, is the CDC's audience? What are the CDC's beliefs about ADHD, and how does the CDC's Web page relate itself to those beliefs? Why would the federal government post a Web page about ADHD? What role does the general public expect the government to play regarding disorders such as ADHD?

During the week, go back and read some of your classmates' posts. Do you agree with their views?

The CDC website on ADHD convey its message towards parents, educators, professional, students or any individual that seeks information on ADHD. Information provide is clear and concise on signs and symptoms, three different types, cause, treatment, and seeking help. There are direct links throughout the website for more in depth information on each topic. Nearly millions of children are diagnosis with neurodevelopmental disorders, also known as ADHD. The US Department of Health and Human Services wants to inform readers' information on ADHD. Furthermore, this diagnosis is manageable with consistent behavior therapy and medication treatment. Most importantly, maintaining a healthy lifestyle with developing healthy eating habits to daily physical activity. The general public expects a