Which of the following would be the most helpful reply to a classmates' draft during peer review?

"Sarah, I really liked this essay! You might want to go to the APA website, but otherwise, great work!"

"Hi Sarah! Please see attached; I used track changes to fix all your grammar errors. Otherwise, super paper!"

"Hi Sarah! Please see attached; I have thoroughly filled out the required peer review sheet for you with many comments and ideas regarding structure, flow, voice, and balance. Don't hesitate to discuss further!"

"Sarah, you really didn't follow directions and I really don't know what I can say to help."

When you are asked to use a peer review sheet and to fill it out thoroughly, that is what you must do. All of the other answers offer little to nothing of value.

Finding other students who wrote about a similar topic and using their paragraphs in your essay, just changing some words so it isn't plagiarism

Our goal should be to give and receive the experience of a true "test reader" with an eye toward real improvement in our essay content.
