

I hope that everyone had a great time over the holiday. I have found this class to be one of my favorites. I feel that I am learning a ton. Just today I had a patient who was prescribed Jardiance for the first time and I was able to look over the patients labs and history and understand why that was the drug of choice in his case. I found it so satisfying to have an actual understanding of why this medication was prescribed to this patient and not just following the order. Endocrine, just like everyone else has said has been my subject with least knowledge but I have enjoyed learning about it.
